Peter McCord can't believe his ears.

Young, handsome, and heir to one of Pittsburgh's wealthiest fortunes, Peter McCord couldn't imagine a life without privilege and a long line of eligible ladies vying for his attention. Until his grandfather's will is read and his life changes unexpectedly. Now disinherited, Peter leaves his controlling family, certain he can make something of himself, by himself. . .and hoping he can find the anonymity and fresh start he desires.

Anne Kirby's heart is broken. . .by a terrible secret. While her job as a university librarian takes her away from her pain, she's determined to keep the truth guarded, even if that means remaining a spinster.

When love brings Anne and Peter face-to-face, revelations regarding both their pasts emerge. But do they have faith that God will restore their hearts?
