Fed up with a government controlled by money, the American people have forced a new constitutional convention in 2037. Twenty-two years later, Bill Waverly, the president's attorney is caught at the center of her trial for high treason - with a potential death penalty hanging in the balance.

Bill painstakingly crafts every move, trying to protect the president, even from herself. He reaches out to his old law professor, the most influential living re-framer of the new constitution, as well as his covert handler from the shadowy organization that helped him push Beth Roche Suarez into the presidency.

He is stunned as he uncovers the genesis and purpose of the organization that gave him unbridled power. But does he discover this too late to save the president's life? And is his own life in danger after the special prosecutor ingeniously forces him to choose between protecting the president and his own deeply buried convictions?
